Earlier in the day, my friend and I came down to the bay for a picnic. After a while, my companion rolled his trouser cuffs up; he walked to the water’s edge and then put his feet in the water. I did not join him. In my mind’s eye I could see his flat, skeletal feet in clear bay water and suddenly I felt such sadness: he could walk away from me at any moment, walk across the water like Robinson Crusoe and set up a shop on another island, with some other island dweller. Love can make you feel as though you’re shipwrecked; love can make you feel as lonely as an island. Watching my friend standing in the bay water, I wanted to call out to him: Come back! But he had not left. And yet I feared he would, leaving me behind with all that love and potential and bay water.

As John lay on the bed, he heard the sound of glass breaking. He looked at his wife, who was still asleep, and decided to investigate. As he stood out of bed, the cold air hit his body and he shuttered. He put on a robe, walked out of the room, and flipped the light switch for the hall, but the light did not come on. As he walked down the dark hall he could hear the wind to come from the room at the end. Slowly he stepped, his eyes fully dilated, he trembled with fear. As he placed his hand on the door handle, the wind stopped. He opened the door and the light in the hall came on and surprised him. He screamed in terror. His wife jumped out of bed and ran to him.

Yesterday was a nice calm day so I decided it was time to have a go at climbing the mast. Down came the mainsail, on went the main electric autopilot, on went my helmet and up I went. Ella’s Pink Lady hasn’t got the tallest mast and there wasn’t much of a sea, but it was nice to be up there! It was good to have a look around up top after being at sea for so long and before we hit the huge wave. Everything looked to be in perfect condition. The view was definitely great and it was really cool to see Ella’s Pink Lady sailing along from another angle. If I can say so myself, what a cute little boat! The trip back down was the most interesting part because I managed to give myself a very smooth ride.

- happy and refreshed

That evening the three families combined their food for a last supper together. Sarah (A) [has been / had been] able to whip up a chocolate dessert with layers of whipped cream, mousse, brownies, and other delights that had everyone feel satisfied. With the remains of supper returned to the coolers and the dishes cleaned and put away, the adults sat sipping coffee around a blazing campfire (B) [during / while] Emil shared his adventures of breaking up endangered-animal smuggling rings. He was a skilled storyteller, and his vocation offered a deep resource for some hilarious tales. Everyone pulled their blankets on tight and listened comfortably in their seats. As the evening wound down, Emil and Vicki headed for bed first with their sleepy-eyed baby. Jesse and Sarah volunteered to stay awhile before walking the Ducette girls back to their campsite. The three Phillips kids and two Ducettes, who had become close friends, immediately disappeared into the safety of the tent trailer to share stories and secrets.

The French post at Tadoussac in Quebec, Canada, was one of the earliest European occupations in North America. Established in 1599 by Francis Grave and Pierre Chauvin, Tadoussac was France’s first trading post in the New World. Although the site survived through the early seventeenth century as a trading post, attempts to establish a larger settlement there (A) was / were not successful. During the site’s first winter of occupation, many of the settlers died due to the harsh living conditions. Occupation of Tadoussac continued into the late seventeenth century, with the site serving as an important mission. A log chapel built on the site in 1747 by Jesuit missionaries (B) is / are known as the “Indians Chapel.” During the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, the local community remained an important lumber and dairy location. Today, the village surrounding Tadoussac is a major tourist destination in southern Quebec.

Benjamin Rush was born in 1745 on a farm near Philadelphia. He earned his bachelor’s degree in 1760 from the University of New Jersey, returned to Philadelphia and studied medicine from 1761 until 1766, and then moved abroad and earned a degree in medicine from the University of Edinburgh in June 1768. He returned once again to Philadelphia in 1769 and started a private practice while also serving as the professor of chemistry at the College of Philadelphia. His commentary about the emerging crisis between the colonies and Britain brought him into association with men such as John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. When the American Revolutionary War broke out in 1775, Rush joined the Continental Army as a surgeon and physician. In June 1776, he was appointed to the Second Continental Congress. Unlike Dickinson, when the time came, he chose to sign the declaration.
Louise Blanchard Bethune was born on July 21, 1856, in Waterloo, New York, to Emma Melona and Dalson M. Blanchard. Her father was a mathematics teacher, no doubt influential in young Louise’s vocational path. Louise Blanchard graduated from Buffalo High School in 1874. She planned to go to Cornell University to study architecture, but instead, in 1891, obtained a job as a drafts person at an architectural and building firm. She learned the craft hands-on, work at the firm for five years. She then partnered with Robert Bethune, what she married two months later. She was the first female architect in the United States, and would go on to design several professional and public buildings in the Buffalo area. Her best known work was the Renaissance-style, 256-room Lafayette Hotel. Opened in 1904, the Lafayette was at the time considered one of the fifteen finest hotels in the country. Louise Blanchard died in 1913 at age of 57.

Temple of Artemis에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

Approximately 400m south of Ayasoluk Hill, on a plain where today a lot of column pieces lie scattered around, once stand the Temple of Artemis, which was one of the Seven Wonders of the World. The temple, whose construction continued for 120 years, dates from the 7th century BCE. The temple was an Ionic Dipteros, with two rows of columns on each of the long sides and three rows of columns on the short sides. Its 127 columns were 19m high and each had a diameter of 1.2m. This temple was set on fire on the same night Alexander the Great was born. The criminal was a mad man, Erostratos, who wanted his name to go down in history. The Ephesians immediately started to construct a new temple. This temple exceeded all earlier perfection. The temple was destroyed by invading Goths in 262 CE and was never rebuilt.

The above pie chart shows the UK market share of food retailers in 2013. ① The total market share of the top 3 food retailers is bigger than that of the rest of the food retailers. ② Among the food retailers included in the chart, Tesco ranks number one as it has about a quarter of the market. ③ In fact, Tesco's market share is equal to the total market share of ASDA and Morrisons, which are respectively the third and the fourth largest market share holders. ④ The second largest market share holder is Sainsbury's, whose market share is about three times as much as that of Marks & Spencer. ⑤ The total market share of the three smallest food retailers — Aldi, Coop, and Lidl — is a little bit smaller than that of Waitrose.
The pie charts above show the proportion of four different online retail sales sections in New Zealand in two different years. ① The sales of film/music and books in New Zealand were larger in 2013 than they were 10 years earlier, whereas sales in the travel and clothing sectors were worse. ② In 2003, the online sales in the travel sector accounted for 36% of total retail sales, which was 12% higher than sales in the clothing sector. ③ The online sales in the travel sector and in the clothing sector declined by the year 2013, with 29% and 16% respectively of total sales by sector. ④ In the film/music sector, online sales rose from 2003 to 2013 by more than 10%, while online sales in the book sector fell 3% in the same period. ⑤ The combined sales for the travel and film/music sectors accounted for over half the total retail sales in both 2003 and 2013.

In order to succeed in a job interview, follow these simple steps. First, research the company before the interview. Having knowledge about the company shows that you are interested in the company. Second, dress appropriately. Wearing a suit gives the impression that you are serious and prepared. Finally, try to smile. Smiling makes people think that you have a positive personality. Following these steps will give you a better chance of getting hired.
